Dr. Daniel Penkar , was invited at Gramonnati Mandal's Arts, Science and Commerce College, Narayangaon, Junnar, Pune on 9th September 2017 to address the students on the topic "Personality Development"

Sir started his session by instilling the idea that personality of an individual is an amalgamation of qualities and attributes which contribute to the person's character and image. It arises from within and makes us who we are. The personality of an individual is determined and judged by his appearance, behaviour; attitude, education, values and some more varying characteristics.

Sir also clarified that personality development is often confused with enhancing dressing sense or just attaining proficiency over English language. He said that a person who dresses well and speaks English fluently is not necessarily supposed to have a good personality.

Sir also gave numerous tips to the students where they can enhance their personality by following simple rules. To conclude he said personality development is an overall development of an individual starting from intrinsic factors like thought process, confidence to the outer level of dressing appropriately.
