He also spoke that social scientists employ a range of methods in order to analyze a vast breadth of social phenomena: from census survey data derived from millions of individuals, to the in-depth analysis of a single agent's social experiences; from monitoring what is happening on contemporary streets, to the investigation of ancient historical documents. Methods rooted in classical sociology and statistics have formed the basis for research in other disciplines, such as political science, media studies, program evaluation and market research.

Sir gave a detail presentation about what research methods are used in different areas and how sampling is done. Sir concluded the session by briefing the students the importance of research in our day to day life as well.
