crucial components, youth need more to achieve long-term success. They need to know how their economy—on a local and national level—is growing and changing, and how this influences the job landscape. He also said that they need to understand how the available career options relate to their own interests and talents. And they need to develop the essential soft and technical skills that employers seek, while gaining relevant experience for the workplace.

Sir said that his session will help the students to answer the following question ask: Who am I? What are my options? Where do I want to go? How do I get there. Thus while concluding he said that choose the right career cautiously.
